Board stops cuts at 3.9%

The Haliburton County School board has drawn the line on budget cuts and is holding to a tax increase of about 3.9 per cent.

The board's management committee met last Tuesday and gave its blessing to a $17-million budget.

Until the province reveals its level of funding, the net impact on the local tax base is uncertain. However, based on last year's funding level, taxpayers can expect a 3.9 per cent increase.

The board began its budget preparation in February with a proposal for $17.5 million. After trimming about $500,000 from that figure, the board was still looking at a spending increase of $636,000.

Last month, the board's administrative committee prepared a list of potential areas for further cost reductions. These included cuts to programs, staffing, busing, custodial and capital improvements. These proposals were met with opposition from the public and from the principals' association.

A group of parents from the Dorset area, attended Tuesday's meeting to make one final appeal in opposition to further cuts. Speaking on behalf of Friends of Dorset School, Val McEchern said the board has reached the point where cost cuts would be counterproductive. She said the board has done a good job in cutting out the frills. She said a small increase is reasonable and further cuts would affect the level of education.

The vocal support for a small tax increase has far outweighed the opposition this year. The local tax coalition, which had initially called for no increase, has been quiet for the past month.

Committee chairman Wally Bunn said the board received much criticism for last year's budget. He noted, however, that the only people commenting this year are those in favour of the small increase. "The tax coalition must realize our backs are against the wall."

While some trustees believe there is still some room for savings — particularly in relation to busing — the final vote Tuesday was unanimous. Education Director Brad Saunders said approval of this budget does not mean that the board cannot continue to look for savings in

a surprise appearance on the Gull River

by Jerry Grozelle

A few people who live along the Gull River at the Haliburton-Victoria boundary were treated to a rare visit last week.

A pair of trumpeter swans made an appearance, accepting hand-outs of bread from at least two families along the river.

The swans dropped by the home of Dan and Donna Nichols, where they got a snack from 17-year-old Melissa, the Nichols' daughter.

From there, the trumpeters swam downstream to take handouts from Judy Pankhurst.

These swans are two of 28 that are part of a pilot project aimed at reintroducing trumpeter swans to Ontario. The reintroduction project is sponsored by the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters.

One of the swans wore yellow wing tags with the number 07 on them. With that number, Harry Lumsden, a retired research scientist with the Ministry of Natural Resources, who is involved with the co-ordination of the project, was

Five nabbed at liquor store heist

An observant witness and quick action by the Minden District OPP resulted in the quick collar of five smash and grab artists last week.

Police report that two front windows of the Wilberforce Liquor Store were smashed and five people entered the store and made off with about $200 worth of liquor.

The get-away vehicle was identified by a witness. Police crashed a party at a cottage just outside Wilberforce and arrested five suspects.

Charged with break, enter and theft and possession of stolen property are Wayne Barr, 21, of Gooderham, Jayson

Grant, 19, of Wilberforce and three young offenders.

The five suspects were taken to Lindsay for a bail hearing Friday.

Police Search

An intensive police search in the Gooderham area failed to turn up two break and enter suspects last week.

Peterborough OPP officers chased two male suspects in a stolen Camaro IROC north on Highway 507 from Highway 36 to Gooderham Tuesday morning. They were suspected of committing break-ins in that area. The car was ditched near Gooderham and the suspects fled on foot.

The Canine Unit from Peterborough and the OPP helicopter were called in to help with the search.

The search was called off about eight hours later, with the suspects still at large.

Police believe another nine cottages in the Trooper and Tamarack lakes area were broken into by the fugitives. At one of those cottages, two bicycles were stolen and ridden to the residence of an employee of Schwant Lumber. A Schwant Lumber pickup truck was stolen from that residence.

The pickup was later recovered in downtown Toronto.

The fugitives haven't been identified at this time but police are still working on the case.

Home Support seeks financial support

by Jerry Grozelle

Frustration is something that volunteers don't need. But one group of Haliburton County volunteers faces that emotion because of a shortfall in funding.

The board of directors for the Haliburton Home Support Services has been talking to the various municipalities within the county trying to drum up financial support.

The service moved to the Echo Hills facility in Haliburton, where the monthly rent is $4,944. The hydro bill is $2,800 every three months.

The annual budget for the operation is $274,000, of which the Ministry of Health contributes 70 per cent. That leaves the volunteers to raise $32,000. In the past, that wasn't a problem because Dysart Township Council chipped in $10,000 toward the rent.

There is no question that the Home

Support group is providing a valuable service, as Dysart Council readily admits.

With budget constraints, Dysart has had to re-evaluate its position. The service is still going to be a budget consideration for Dysart, but as Dysart Councillor Jerry Walker says, "It probably won't be the full amount."

Dysart has asked the service to approach the other municipalities in the county to see if they would be willing to share some of the costs since the service does cover the entire county.

Most of the councils the service has approached have indicated that they will consider the request in their budget processes. Stanhope was one of those councils.

Earl Hayne, a member of the board of directors of the service, told Stanhope council that the service had the opportunity to move from its previous location to another one in Haliburton but the Ministry of Health insisted that the Echo Hills facility be used.

Echo Hills is owned by the Haliburton Community Housing Corporation. The part of Echo Hills that the service occupies was originally supposed to be a cafeteria for residents who were unable to do their own cooking. But that plan didn't come to fruition.

Haliburton Home Support Services has 249 volunteers who provide services for 595 clients across the county.

Statistics quoted by Hayne indicate that Haliburton County has the largest concentration of senior citizens in the province. The latest figures show that 35 per cent of the county's population is 50 years of age or older and 24 per cent is 65 or older.

"Most seniors want to live in their own homes," Hayne told Stanhope Council. He added that his group provides the necessary services to help keep people in their homes longer.

Unless the other municipalities can be persuaded to provide some funding, the volunteers will be forced to find other methods of making up any shortfall.

Helen Henderson, another member of the service's board of directors appealed to council: "Whatever you can spare in your budget would be very much appreciated."

"I think we're doing a wonderful job."

It will be at least another month before the service knows where it stands. Most councils won't have set their budgets until then.

Hayne said that the volunteers have a number of events that raise money but if they are forced to raise up to 30 per cent more, it could have a negative impact on the morale of the volunteers.

"It's hard to keep the interest level up when you're not appreciated for what you do," he said.

The Minden Library was once again the recipient of a donation of books this past week as members of the community's Kinette Club presented county Librarian Joel Levis with 35 new children's books. The addition is a result of a $500 donation made to the library. Presenting the books on behalf of the club were vice president Julie Jones, left and Cathy Thomas. Levis expressed his appreciation for the books, noting that children should be introduced to reading early in their life. "Nothing is more important to developing the reading habits of a child than to be read to at an early age and to discover the wonder of books," he said. "There is absolutely nothing better a parent can do to assist in a child's education."

Syrup season

'Liquid Gold' is a family tradition at Locklin's Waverley Brook Farm

by Jerry Grozelle

Nestled near the base of a hill just west of County Road 1, south of the village of Haliburton is a small building where Godfrey Tyler and his dad, Charlie make liquid gold. No, it isn't a still; it's a maple syrup making operation.

Godfrey is the fourth generation of Tylers who have run the operation since 1922 and he may take exception to Waverley Brook Farm's product being called liquid gold. With his setup, Tyler says he has the potential to generate $500 worth of maple syrup a day. But the season only lasts an average of about 10 days.

"There's 355 more days in the year when it doesn't generate any income," he says.

Tyler considers maple syrup a crop, and like most other agricultural crops, payday only comes once a year.

"It has to be divided up over 365 days," Tyler said.

The sap run was almost finished by the middle of last week and Tyler said that if he got two more good days he might get 600 to 650 litres from the 1994 season. But conditions were deteriorating rapidly by that time. The only saving grace was the fact that there was still some frost in the ground, which would slow the trees from producing buds. Once the buds start to form, the quantity of sap is reduced and the quality of the syrup decreases dramatically.

Last year was a disaster as far as Tyler is concerned. The run was poor and Waverley Brook Farm produced only about 350 litres. But this year, a new sugar house was built in a better location, increasing the potential for more volume.

With a total of about 3,500 feet of pipeline, the gravity-fed system covers about 10 acres of maple bush. The pipeline is fed by about 650 to 700 taps.

"Some of those trees have been tapped since the operation started in 1922," Tyler said.

With the new location of the sugar house, the operation has the potential of increasing the pipeline to cover as much as 70 acres.

Over the past 72 years there was a span of about 10 years when the maple syrup operation didn't run. But it got back into full swing six years ago when Godfrey got big way.

Tyler said that the sap run was late getting started this year -- by a week to 10 days.

"The sugar content was good this year though," Tyler said. "It was about 3.2 per cent on average. And one day it was up to 4.4 per cent in the storage tank."

Maple syrup producing is a labour intensive industry. There is the actual boiling down of the sap, the tapping, the stringing of pipelines and the filtering, packaging and marketing of the finished product. There has to be a good supply of firewood for the evaporator too.

"I like to have about 12 bush cords on hand," Tyler said.

His preference of fire wood isn't the same as he would use to heat the house.

"I prefer pine, spruce, hemlock and poplar," he said. "I want an intense flame."

"People will come in and walk right up to the doors of the fire box when we've got the fire going good," Tyler said, with a chuckle. "But they soon start to edge back. A comfortable distance seems to be about six feet from the evaporator."

Most maple syrup producers will tell you that it is the type of job you wouldn't want to do for more than a couple of weeks at a time.

Maple syrup producer Godfrey Tyler, seen here in his new sugar house, on County Road 1 near Locklin, says the syrup crop this year was below average. Still that's an improvement over the previous year when the season and flow were very short. Waverley Brook Farm produced almost 600 litres this season.

OSAID back in the drivers' seat with lots of spirit

After a weekend conference in Mississauga, Haliburton's chapter of Ontario Students Against Impaired Driving (OSAID) is eager to promote its cause.

Kim Harding, Christy Ackerblade and Kyla Grexton were the three delegates from Haliburton Highlands Secondary School to attend the OSAID motivational conference. The three grade 11 students said they picked up a lot of ideas at the conference that they'd like to implement here.

Along with about 500 other students from all across Ontario, Harding, Ackerblade and Grexton participated in a variety of workshops and had the opportunity to hear from some of the speakers who are taking their message of responsible drinking into the schools.

The school's OSAID group has continued to be active throughout the year with displays, activities, events and fundraising drives. The conference, however, has provided them with some fresh new ideas and the motivation needed to keep the province-wide campaign against drinking and driving strong.

The OSAID committee in Haliburton now has about 15 active members but the group is hoping to attract more by raising OSAID's profile in the school. They say it's difficult to attract new members because many think of OSAID as an anti-alcohol organization.

The group wants to make students aware that they are not against responsible drinking.

It's okay to drink, they say, just don't drink and drive.

To help raise the group's profile, they are planning a number of activities. Off the top, they've set a tentative date of May 22 for a "Sober Suds" car wash. The event will help raise money for further activities while also raising awareness of the group and their goal. It's also an opportunity for students to come out and have some fun.

Other tentative plans include: a BYOB (Bring Your Own Banana) contest whereby students will participate in a sundae-making competition; a Mocktail contest in which students prepare alcohol-free cocktails, and a goldfish race, in which the fish are encouraged to race along a length of eaves troughing.

One of the more serious activities in the works is the Wall of Life. For this, students are asked to detail their experiences with drinking and driving on a "block". The blocks will then be placed together to form a wall for all to observe.

Considering that someone in Ontario is injured in an alcohol-related car accident every 30 minutes, the renewed interest in OSAID is a welcome happening.

Barry A. Cray, Funeral Director

"If I could sum up everything I've learned to date at Gordon A. Monk Funeral Home, it would have to be our Golden Rule philosophy of service.

"As a Palliative Care volunteer and a funeral director, I can relate well with this philosophy. Many people who aren't familiar with funeral service or aren't sure what to expect at least want to be treated fairly—the same way they would treat others.

"At Gordon A. Monk Funeral Home, that's what our Golden

Rule philosophy is all about. Friendly, caring, compassionate service from people who do more than simply try to meet your needs, but try to sincerely understand them.

"And I'm learning more about this philosophy every day. As a member of the International Order of the Golden Rule, we have a chance to associate with funeral homes from around the world who share in the same high standards of service. Service measured not by gold but by the Golden Rule."

Troubled waters for marina owners

Carnochans feel the Federal Business Development Bank has not been fair

Jim and Gloria Carnochan are not "happy campers".

In fact they are campers who have been told to get off the property and out of the business they were attempting to salvage, and with them go seven full-time jobs and 10 student summer positions.

The Carnochans have been the on-again, off-again owners of Backwoods Marina at Kennisis Lake. The business includes a marina with service, refueling and storage facilities, a general store and a restaurant. In the mid eighties, when times were good, the business generated a reasonable return. However in the past couple years, like many businesses in the Highlands, they operated close to the edge.

That is why they were pleased to find someone to purchase their operation in the autumn of 1991. They felt new blood and enthusiasm, along with the infusion of additional capital which a new owner could bring to the business, could help boost it into the nineties.

When they arranged the sale, the Federal Business Development Bank out of Peterborough was involved in the transaction. The federally-run institution was already holding mortgages on the property. The new owners agreed to assume the mortgages, however the Carnochans were still listed as the personal guarantors, backing the loans with such assets as additional property they own in the Kennisis Lake area and the home of Jim's father in Port Perry. The mortgage, drafted a number of years ago still carried a 13.75 percent interest rate.

According to Jim and Gloria, the new owners were unable to bring the infusion of capital the business needed, and, from their assessment, they had neither the skills nor the expertise to operate a marina and the related businesses. Within one and a half years, the business failed and in May of 1993 the new owners declared bankruptcy. They simply packed up and left. While the new owners remained in control of the business, they only made a few payments against the outstanding mortgage and two of the marina's important dealerships, for out-board motors and snowmobiles, were reclaimed by the manufacturers.

The 1993 summer season was just weeks away. The owners of the close to one hundred boats in the storage sheds would be returning to their cottages soon, expecting to find their boats waiting for them in the water. The highest earning potential for the marina and the associated store was about to begin and the doors could be locked. The representatives from FBDB asked the Carnochans to step in and operate the business if only to keep a viable operation.

Jim and Gloria were reluctant to step in. They had watched over the preceding one and a half years as the goodwill they had built up in the business was slowly eroded. And with the two major dealerships gone, the earning potential was greatly reduced. However, with additional coaxing from the FBDB, and an advance of $4000 to fill the gas tanks, they agreed to keep the business operating.

According to the Carnochans, the FBDB agreed to work with them in rebuilding the business, however their experience contradicts that statement. They quickly learned that the bank intended to hold them responsible for the non-payment of mortgage payments between 1992 and May 1993, the resultant penalties and extra interest and the legal fees the bank incurred in pursuing the interim owners. The bank also refused to rewrite the mortgage to reflect the lower interest rates.

"They refused to negotiate with us. The bank demanded immediate mortgage payments as well as the missed payments," Gloria said. "The bank issued power of sale notices and cut off all further negotiations."

Jim and Gloria Carnochan.

FBDB responds

Representatives of the Federal Business Development Bank in Peterborough were given an opportunity to comment on the details surrounding the Carnochan's experience with the institution.

Nell McGrath an official at the Peterborough branch, said the bank could not discuss any of the particulars involved in the transactions surrounding the Backwoods Marina financing. He said he was bound by the bank's policy of confidentiality regarding customer dealings and could not respond to specifics mentioned by the Carnochans.

He noted that even though the Carnochans had chosen to speak publicly about their situation with the bank, there were other parties involved.

McGrath however did offer a number of general observations. He said the FBDB policy was to work as closely as possible with clients in resolving problems and negotiating solutions to the satisfaction of both parties. He said in the past the bank has agreed, for example, to capitalize arrears to assist clients.

He point out that the FBDB borrows the money on the open market at the going rate which it then lends to its clients. The customers are aware of and agree to the interest rate prior to taking the loan. Since the bank has an obligation to repay the loan at a fixed rate of interest it is impossible for the FBDB to have any flexibility in changing the interest rate once the borrower agrees to the terms of the loan.

McGrath said that beginning a power of sale procedure is the last and most drastic step the FBDB takes in protecting its interest.

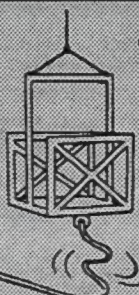

a greater degree of flexibility in its dealings with them. They wrote to Liberal MP John O'Reilly, Minister of Finance Paul Martin, Senator Trevor Eyton (who has a cottage on Kennisis Lake), John Manley, the minister of Industry who oversees the FBDB operations, former MP Bill Scott, former MPP John Eakins and even Jean Chretien, who was the Leader of the Opposition at the time. While most of the politicians expressed sympathy for the position the Carnochans found themselves in, it appears they could do little to move the FBDB to discuss more reasonable terms.

At the request of the bank, the couple paid several thousand dollars to have an accounting firm, Peat, Marwick and Thorne draft a business plan for the marina. The plan was sent to the bank in August of 1993. According to the Carnochans, it didn't seem to have any impact on the bank's approach to the business and the owners. Another effort to discuss the future of the business also drew a blank and just before Christmas, the Carnochans were told the business was to be sold under a power of sale.

Despite this gloomy prospect, the

A life-long responsibility

For many, this Friday will be just like any other day of the week. For others, however, April 22 will have special significance because it is Earth Day, one day of the year to think about the environment and our impact on it.

It is unfortunate that Earth Day is only a once-a-year event. Unfortunate, because it devalues the message the day is meant to impart and creates a climate of complacency. Having a single day out of the year may leave some with the impression that their impact on environment is of little consequence the other 364 days.

Marking Earth Day also creates a feeling of distance and isolation, not only from the problems of the environment, but from the environment itself. This distancing has evolved over the years as the population has become increasingly more urbanized. Our impact on the world has become greater as technology has evolved and global population has increased.

The result is that many think of the environment as something apart from their lives, something they can put under a microscope and dissect, or something they only have to think about one day a year. Unfortunately the environment is not some distant set of problems to be dealt with when there is time.

The human community must change its perspective and realize it is a vital part of the environment, connected to it in so many ways. And, at every step of the way, and every day of the year, that community is having an effect on the environment. Every action has its consequences; consequences, whether negative or positive, in which the individual and the community must share.

Most environmental problems which have been identified seem far beyond the reach or influence of individual citizens. And yet those problems exist in most part because one person decided on a course of action and many others agreed to follow. Individuals cannot hide from their responsibility for creating the problems around us. However finding fault and assigning blame achieves little except to assuage the collective conscience.

If individual actions created the problems, it will also take individual actions to reverse them. Singly the citizens of the world can make a difference, not only in their daily lives, as they move through the environment, but also in the greater collective sense. Positive individual action can help re-direct people's thinking to confront the problems faced by our environment which will lead naturally to a better world for all.

This is not a one day a year job, it is a life-long responsibility; a responsibility shared with every other individual on the earth today....and tomorrow.

SEAT BELT BLITZ, APRIL 17-23.

THE TIMES, MINDEN, 4-18-94

What about duties?

Editor,

Since, as your headline put it, "Everyone belongs to a special interest group", the futility of splitting mankind as the Canadian Bill of Rights attempts to do, should be evident to all.

The rights (whatever happened to duties?), far from improving Canadians' access to justice and compassion, have done nothing but muddy up the issues.

With ill-concealed arrogance, some of our past legislators have claimed to improve the Biblical codes of conduct, only to produce wimpy documents that are becoming easy prey to amoral new-age manipulators.

That is why, by standing four-square for family values, as he did during his victorious electoral campaign, Chris Hodgson will add one more sane voice to Queen's Park, speaking up for dignity, faithfulness and normalcy.

Chamber needs our help

Editor,

I would like to comment on Carol Moffatt's Chamber column in The Times, April 11.

The article presented both sides of the funding dilemma extremely well. It stated council's problem with lack of funds to distribute as well as the Chamber's concerns about the programs that will have to be cut. It is not just because of Council cut-backs that many of the Chamber's proposed programs will not happen. It is also because of the apathy and shortsightedness of some.

The ones to lose are the people whose support is needed most, the businesses of Haliburton. There isn't money available from Council, so let's help the Chamber through membership and volunteer support. Here is a way to do something instead of just complaining and pointing fingers.

Floored by scuff marks

Editor,

I too have a problem with the Minden Community Centre's rental policy. While a member of the "chosen" recreational committee (past two years) I could not understand the facility manager refusing to rent the community centre for line dancing.

The reason for the refusal was scuff marks. I find it very peculiar that I can scuff the floors at any other time. To date I am not aware of a footwear policy prohibiting cowboy boots. Could this perhaps be an example of systematic discrimination?

P.S. Are all the arena policies going to be policed with such diligence in the future? i.e. no alcoholic beverages in the changerooms.

Don't believe everything on TV

Editor:

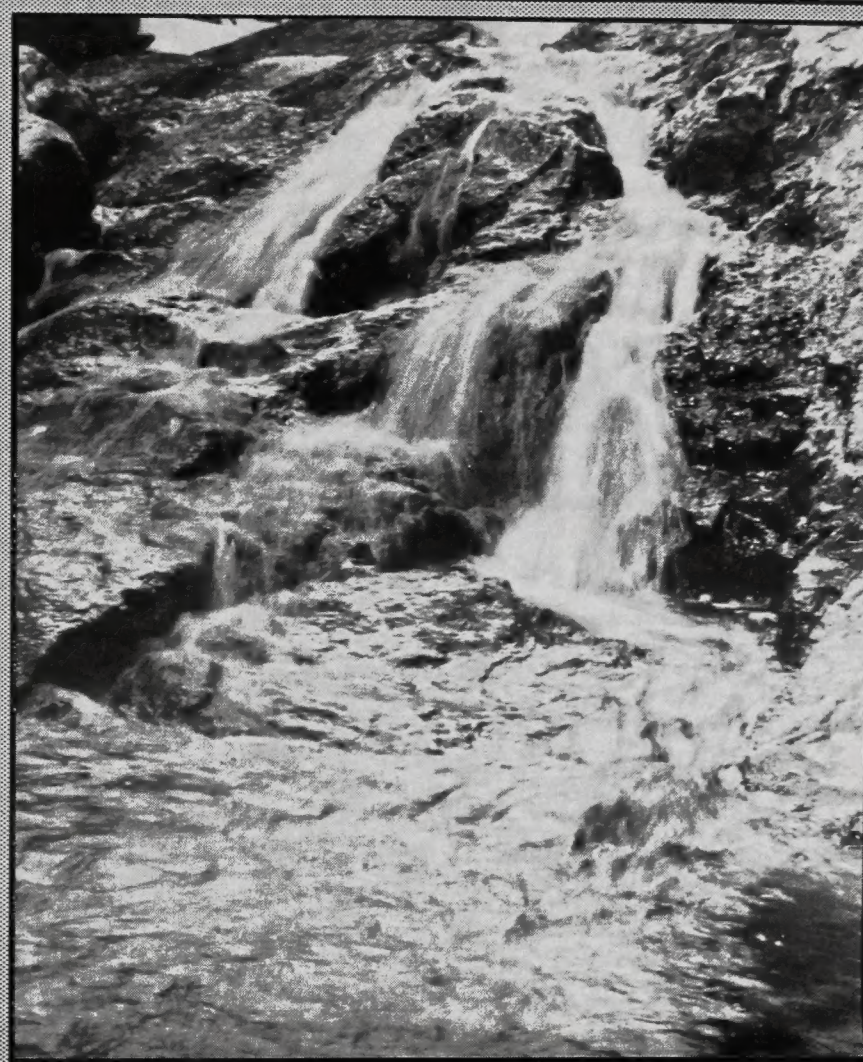

By this time, many people will have seen recent advertisements on television praising nuclear technology. Several of the advertisements contain very misleading statements. For example, one advertisement states that "nuclear power means cleaner air." In fact, nuclear power stations are designed to routinely release many radioactive pollutants into the air that we breathe, and the water that we drink. All exposure to radiation increases our risk of contracting cancer and other health problems. The advertisements make no mention of the risk of a catastrophic accident at a nuclear power plant. The booklet being offered in the advertisements is also extremely misleading.

The sponsor of this $2 million propaganda campaign — the Canadian Nuclear Association (CNA) — does not have the integrity to identify itself in the ads. To add insult to injury, the largest supporter of the CNA is Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., which receives a federal taxpayer subsidy of about $200 million per year. Our electricity bills also support the CNA. Ontario Hydro quietly rejoined the CNA in February, after quitting in 1992 due to controversy over CNA's pro-nuclear bias.

Nuclear power is uneconomic, unsafe and unnecessary. Alternatives such as conservation, renewable energy and cogeneration, are readily available...so don't believe everything you see on TV!

Words cannot express...

Thank you.

Now there's a phrase I wish I heard less often.

Not because I'm against gratitude — I'm not. It's just that we use the phrase too loosely. It doesn't mean much any more.

"Many thanks!" I burble to the sales clerk who hands me a fistful of nickels and dimes. "Thanks a lot!" I crow to the bus driver I will never see again as I hop out the front door of the Greyhound. "Thanks for everything" I hoot at telephone voices, receptionists and other sundry passing strangers whose lives touch mine with the slightest of gossamer jiggles.

I'm not saying these people don't deserve to be thanked — only that it leaves me with nothing to say when I fetch up against something for which I am truly grateful.

Like my health. My family. My friends. I mean, Jake's a great buddy, but if I ever went up to him and said "Hey, Jake — many thanks for being my friend, eh? — he'd probably wrestle me to the ground and take away my car keys.

As a rule, women handle this sort of thing much better than we strutting, grunting, sensitivity-deficient studs. With most men it's just "Hey, how about them Maple Leafs?" Women on the other hand, have a thousand ways of saying thank you with their eyes, their hugs, their phone calls and their random notes.

What got me ruminating on this gratitude kick was an item I spied in the paper. The story concerns Julia Sommers, a struggling single mother who puts in 14-hour days as a waitress and a motel maid to put food on the table and clothes on the backs of her two little kids.

Well, Julia's luck changed last week. She was crossing a shopping mall parking lot when she spotted, among the dixie cups and the beer cans and the leaves — a necklace.

A very beautiful necklace.

She took it to a jeweller and asked for an appraisal.

"I never thought about keeping it, even after the jeweller told me what it was worth. I teach my daughters to be honest and I'm no hypocrite."

Black'n White

by Arthur Black

The jeweller sighed, screwed his jeweller's loupe into his eye, squinted, stiffened, then reverently handed the necklace back to the woman.

"Off the top of my head," he told Julia Sommers, "approximately two hundred thousand dollars."

So Julia's on easy street, right? And she's going to cash in the choker and quit her two jobs and move somewhere nice and quiet and spend the rest of her life being grateful to Lady Luck for making her cross that shopping mall parking lot, right?

Wrong. That's you and me. What Julia did was dig into her handbag and fork out about $50 to pay for newspaper ads. The ads read "Found: One necklace in the Four Way Shopping Mall Plaza. Owner call and describe."

And Julia's telephone number was printed below.

It wasn't long before Julia's phone rang and a woman's voice — quavering with gratitude — described how she'd lost the necklace while shopping. She was a banker's wife and she described the necklace perfectly. Julia agreed to meet her at the mall, because, well, Julia wasn't all that proud of the apartment building she had to live in.

At the mall Julia saw a woman climb out of a car — a Rolls Royce — and hurry towards her. She identified herself as the banker's wife and took the necklace from Julia with trembling hands.

She thanked Julia profusely, gushing that words couldn't express how much it meant to have it back.

And then pulling a wad of bills out of her handbag, she said "And Julia, your honesty should not go unrewarded."

And the banker's wife handed Julia two dollars, thanked her again, and drove away.

Leaving Julia Sommers 48 bucks in the red for those classifieds, and very sorry that she didn't pawn the rocks, right?

Wrong again. "I never thought about keeping it, even after the jeweller told me what it was worth," she says. "I teach my daughters to be honest and I'm no hypocrite."

That you aren't ma'am. But you are a lady with a lot of class — something the "lady" in the Rolls Royce with the diamonds and emeralds winking out of her neck wattles will never be.

And for that Julia Sommers, I say thank you. And I mean it.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

This week we received a catalogue from a company called Successories. The company supplies motivational items such as posters, mugs, cards and books which provide motivational messages to fellow workers and customers. The material offered was very interesting, but one of the statements which caught our eye, and we think deserves repeating, reads simply as follows: "RULE # 1: If you don't take care of the customer . . . someone else will."

ROCKCLIFFE SNACK BAR

A tip of the hat to the Harry and Sue Pye, operators of the Rockcliffe Snack Bar, Minden who have left after 15 years. The popular snack bar outlet will continue to operate under the Rockcliffe Tavern management. Best of luck to Harry and Sue.

THIS & THAT

We may be a little late in passing on our greetings, but once one reaches the venerable age of 50, what's a week or two? Happy Birthday Wayne at the Storeroom Natural Foods! . . . and welcome back Lorne and Rena Parno of Norland Trading. They escaped winter's blasts in the sunny south. Nice tan guys!

BOWES & COCKS

The Minden office of Bowes and Cocks Real Estate has moved. The office has relocated to the new quarters next to the Moynes Furniture Store at Highway 35 and Main Street. The sales staff is all settled in and ready to welcome old friends and new.

K ENTERPRISES

Linda and Dan Kay have gone nuts....and bolts. They have expanded their line at K Enterprises in Haliburton to include over 2000 kinds of fasteners, nuts and bolts. It is amazing how many different kinds of fasteners are used in a variety of applications from furniture fasteners to monster carriage bolts. They even have environmentally friendly screws for deck use. The fastener shop can be reached through the window showroom.

TRI-COUNTY DISTRIBUTORS

We see that Keith Oitment has moved to a new location and expanded his product line. Tri-County Distributors is now located in the Valu-mart Plaza. He plans to add to his current line and offer a wider range of electronic appliances including televisions, VCRs, stereos and other home electronics. Tri-County is already well-known for its satellite dishes and receivers.

MINDEN HOME HARDWARE

John Pentney has installed the new Interact terminal at his Minden store. The machine allows customers to immediately transfer funds from their account to Home Hardware's. The customer remains in control. After the amount of the sale is entered on the keyboard, it is handed over to the buyer. She confirms the amount is correct, then enters her PIN (Personal Identification Number) and the transaction is completed. It saves on cheque writing, and according to those in the know, it will be the way a lot of business is transacted in the future.

VAN LIESHOUT REAL ESTATE

A new coat of paint, inside and out, new front steps, new carpet and some bright red awnings have put a whole new face on Larry Van Lieshout's real estate office on Highlands Street in Haliburton.

LARRY'S VIDEO

Another Larry, this time in Minden, Larry Cummins is also doing an interior refurbishing. The changes will help him accommodate an expanded line of arts and crafts, create a new video rental display format and a new security system.

Brigadoon to make Highlands appearance

One day every hundred years, the mythical town of Brigadoon appears in the Scottish Highlands. Luckily for us, it will make an appearance for five days in the Haliburton Highlands this fall as the Haliburton Highlands Little Theatre stages its production of the musical "Brigadoon".

The musical play was written by Lerner and Lowe, the same writing team that brought us "Camelot" and once again the audience will be entertained by a wonderful romantic comedy with an excellent and familiar musical score. Songs include "The Heather on the Hill" and "Almost Like Being in Love."

The local production will see a return of the team of Curtis Eastmure as director and Melissa Stephens as musical director. These two people, with the assistance of many others, staged the last local musical production of "Camelot." This show promises to be every bit as exciting and entertaining.

Auditions for "Brigadoon" will be held May 23, starting at noon at the United Church in Haliburton. Audition material for anyone interested will be available soon. Even though this is a musical, there are a number of non-singing parts. Watch this newspaper for further information. Meanwhile, if you are interested in working backstage or on a technical aspect of theatre, you can express your willingness to help by contacting the producer, Craig Saunders, at 457-9125.

Musical productions are always popular and tend to sell out quickly. Advance tickets for this show will be on sale at the theatre group's performances of their current production, "Daddy's Dyin'. Who's Got the Will?" This wonderful two act comedy, written by Del

Members' show opens

The Spring Members' Show is now underway at the Agnes Jamieson gallery in Minden. The show opened April 16. Many of the gallery's talented painters, artists and craftspeople are displaying their work in the two rooms at the gallery. This year the show includes paintings in acrylic, watercolour, pastel, oil, as well as crochet, quilting, stained glass, basketry, carving, woodwork and more.

This show gives the community an opportunity to view the members' work and to cast a vote in four different categories: painting, fabric/yarn work, multi-media and best of the show.

The winners are announced at the closing reception scheduled for May 7. The gallery is open Tuesday to Saturday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Cowboys boost hospital fund

The local charitable organization, Cowboys That Care reports that their April 9 benefit dance was sold out.

Organizers are thrilled with the response to their event. Speaking for the group, secretary/treasurer France Rechat stated that, "Close to 350 people from all over Haliburton County attended the dance and, from the comments we have been hearing, everyone thoroughly enjoyed Rick Jones and Silverthorne. We like the fact that Rick himself is originally from the Eagle Lake - West Guilford area."

Local businesses generously donated a total of 50 door prizes, again showing great support for the cause. Jane Smith of Haliburton volunteered her talents as a line dancing teacher and the organizers thank Jane for her contribution.

The group has not tallied all donations to date, but thinks the total donation could top $3000.

Vice President of the organization, Lorne MacAller states that, "The people of Minden, and Haliburton County in general, have shown us that they want to support the hospital in Minden. We, as an organization, are committed to offer them something in return for their support. We will be trying different ways of raising funds, and hopefully will receive the same enthusiastic support towards our other fund raising activities."

Plans are already underway for another dance, a charity golf tournament and a country and western talent contest.

Shores and directed by Tom Robinson, will be performed at the High School Auditorium on April 29, 30 and May 6, 7. Show time is 8 p.m. and tickets are $7 for adults, $5 for students and seniors in advance or $8/$6 at the door. Tickets are available at The Storeroom in Minden and at Paulette's in Haliburton.

Hydro novices good sports to season's end

A recent exhibition hockey game against the Cannington Kings ended the competition for the Minden Ontario Hydro Monarchs.

For the first time this season it was the Kings who earned a hard-fought 3-2 win.

The game was an action packed crowd pleaser, with both teams in contention throughout.

The Monarchs took the lead in the first period when Nicholas Mitchell converted a pass from Evan Kernohan.

Before the first frame was over, the Cannington squad was back on even terms.

Seven minutes into the middle frame Jamie Colliss played the puck behind the Cannington net. Matt Mattsson picked it up and passed it out to Ben Carpenter in the slot. Carpenter tucked it in past the Kings' netminder for a 2-1 Minden lead.

The Kings rebounded once again to tie the score going into the third.

Cannington got the deciding goal in the third to earn the 3-2 win.

A father and son game was the last ice time the Minden team saw for this spring.

"These little league players have good reason to feel pride and reward for their individual talent, performance, effort, strong minds and skills," says Anne Walker, who has been the team's media contact all season.

Walker added that although they had some tough times throughout the season, the players demonstrated an attitude of true sportsmanship — win, lose or draw.

Walker singled out goaltender Mark Snell as an example of the team's spirit.

"He played more aggressively and confidently between the pipes," she said.

Those who helped out off the ice were appreciated for their efforts.

"The volunteers played a big part in the novice A team's year," Walker said, sending out her thanks to coach Joe Mitchell, trainer Jim Vanderlip, manager Rick Kinsman and helper David Brown.

Back to the diamonds: Most of these ball players from last season will be taking to the diamonds of Minden again soon. Registrations are completed and all that remains is the selection of teams and enough warm dry weather to get the diamonds in shape for the coming season. With the warm weather we've been experiencing lately the local ball players are anxious to hear the familiar direction from the umpire to "play ball."

Junior badminton Kawartha qualifiers

The Junior Badminton Kawartha Qualifying Tournament was held last Wednesday in Port Hope with 12 Haliburton students advancing to the Kawartha championship in Peterborough.

The duo of Tim Stouffer and Bill Koz finished first in the boys' singles event. Their toughest competition of the tournament was from another Haliburton team, Jon Hebert and Mark Hughes, who placed second.

The girls' doubles competition saw Jody Reid and Rachel Wilson take second place.

In the mixed doubles class, Sarah Johnson and Mike Bradley finished second. Nikki Gauley and Rob Andrus were fourth in that class.

Jess Wallace was fourth in the girls' singles division.

The boys' singles competition saw Colin Klages finish fourth.

Seven Haliburton senior badminton players advance

Seven senior badminton players from Haliburton Highlands Secondary School will be going to the Kawartha championships in Peterborough. They finished in the top four at the Kawartha Qualifying Tournament in Cobourg last Tuesday.

Eight schools took part in the qualifier.

Johnathan Bishop and Lindsay Francis were first in the mixed doubles competition in Cobourg.

Sigone Mandrup and Stacey Bunn took top honours in the ladies' doubles class. Bobbi Griffin and Dawn Gartshore placed third in the same division.

Anna Tomlinson was fourth in the ladies' singles.

A total of 16 schools will be represented at the Kawartha championships.

Snowmobilers set to return to the trails... in eight months

by Brian Watts

As I look out my window and write this final update for the 93/94 season, I look at bare roads, green grass and realize it's all over for another season.

Paul Daigle and his work crew have completed the necessary removal of signs and markings on lakes and the general completion of duties to wind down the season.

Many thanks to everyone connected with the HCSA who has volunteered countless hours so we can all enjoy the season we love best.

On June 25, the HCSA will be holding its annual appreciation dinner and annual general meeting. The meeting will be at Hart Lodge on Highway 35 at 9 p.m. If you are interested in becoming a director or a volunteer we welcome you to attend this open meeting.

At this time I would like to take the opportunity to sincerely give a big thanks to all our land owners for their support and use of their land. If the HCSA has slipped up and forgotten, please call me and it will be rectified immediately (457-9620).

As the season comes to an end, plans have already been made for some of us to attend the 1994 convention from Sept. 16 to 18 at the Deerhurst Resort. It should be a busy weekend, so we'll give you all the details in our first update for the 94/95 season.

Don't forget to join everyone at the largest snowmobile show in the world at the Markham Fair Grounds on Oct. 14, 15 and 16. So from the executive and directors of the HCSA, we wish one and all a great summer. Remember, I'll see you on the trails in just eight short months.

For coverage of your sporting event in The Times, call Sports Editor Jerry Grozelle to make the arrangements. The number is 286-1288.

Swans trumpet a spring fanfare able to give a detailed history of the bird's movements since it was hatched by Ted Boote of Hastings, Ontario four years ago.

On November 14, 1990, 07 was taken to Wye Marsh (near Midland), where he was kept until he was released in early April of 1991. He stayed at Wye Marsh until the first week of December, '91.

Over the past three years, Lumsden has built up an extensive file of 07 sightings. The swan has travelled extensively in Ontario, from Hamilton, along the shore of Lake Ontario in the Pickering area, back to Wye Marsh, to the Pefferlaw-Udora area, up to North Bay and across to the junction of the Madawaska and Ottawa rivers and even a sojourn into Quebec, where he was spotted at Temiscaming on April 19, 1993. By May 1, '93 he was back on Lake Ontario.

Some time over the last several months, 07 lost his wing tags. He was recaptured in Pickering and retagged on March 30 of this year. He was seen at Toronto Island on April 1 and the last sighting before coming to Gull River was on April 10 at Udora.

His travelling companion is believed to be Number 90. She isn't wearing wing tags but she does sport a leg band. Lumsden said he tried to capture 07's companion at the same time as 07 was caught, but she managed to keep out of reach.

Both swans are four years old, about the age when they start nesting.

"I wish they'd settle down and start nesting," Lumsden said.

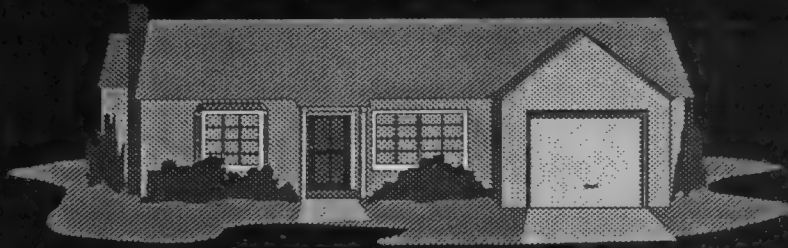

Number 90 was hatched at Frenchman's Bay in 1990.

Lumsden said there are just 28 free-flying trumpeter swans in Ontario at this time. The first successful wild brood hatched in Ontario in the past 200 years was at Wye Marsh last spring.

Lumsden is able to track the movements of the trumpeter swans with the help of ornithologists, bird watchers, naturalists and people like Donna Nichols, who are interested enough to call in and report sightings.

If anyone sees the pair in the area again, Harry Lumsden would appreciate any information that can be provided, especially if the bird without the wing tags can be identified. She is wearing a leg band and if anyone is able to coax her onto a dock or beach long enough to get a look at the number on the band, Lumsden would appreciate confirmation of the bird's identity. The last two numbers on the band are the most important, Lumsden says. He can be contacted at 144 Hillview Road, Aurora, Ontario, L4G 2M5.

Carnochans continued to search for a way out of their dilemma. Earlier this spring they began negotiations with an individual who said he was willing to purchase the business for "fair market value or at the appraised value." The Carnochans said they would be willing to remain responsible for the balance of the debt through the security which the bank now holds. This offer provided a last glimmer of hope in that the business they had built during the 1980's would continue to operate, the employees would have jobs, and the bank would have a reasonable chance of recouping its investment.

Jim says the bank was advised of the offer to purchase made by the interested party, however, rather than responding to the offer, the bank allowed the waiting required before a power of sale order becomes valid to expire, leaving the bank in control. Even in this final act, the communication from the bank to the Carnochans was erratic or almost nonexistent. The couple was not given formal notification that the power of sale process had in fact begun, and it had to be re-instituted to give them time to respond. They also claim that the court was not informed at the time the power of sale order was requested, that a signed letter of intent to purchase the business existed.

The power of sale order became effective Friday (April 15). The Carnochans have all but given up on the process and moved their personal effects, the stock and the boats and snowmobiles in storage to a facility at their commercial lot on the Kennisis Lake Road, at the turn to Haliburton Forest and Wildlife.. (The bank's claim is only on the buildings and the land.)

"We wanted to ensure that the clients who entrusted their boats to us will have access to them when they want them this summer," Gloria stated. The couple plans to open a small convenience store at the location and, since they will no longer have the shoreline location, they plan to offer a mobile marine service in which the mechanic comes to the problem, rather than the problem coming to the marina. The new operation will provide several jobs, but not the number the former location offered.

"If the marina sells, and the new owner is someone we can work with, we will co-operate with them," Jim stated.

The action of the FBDB does not relieve the Carnochans of their obligations, and they are well aware their home, business and Jim's father's home could be claimed by the bank if they cannot recover what they claim to be the outstanding amount in any sale of the marina.

In the meantime, however, they can do little but shake their heads and wonder about the intransigence of an organization which they felt was set in place to assist small business. They say the lack of communication and the bank's inability or unwillingness to consider other options leaves them wondering just what values the bank represents. As far as they're concerned the 'business development' portion of the institution's name was definitely not representative of their dealings with the FBDB.

WOMEN'S EMERGENCY HOUSE FACT SHEET

As excitement mounts over the house raising of Women's Emergency House, and over 100 volunteers gear up to build the "house in a week", S.I.R.C.H. awaits a decision by Dysart Council as to whether they will issue a building permit!

Some facts about S.I.R.C.H.:

- * S.I.R.C.H. is a non-share capital corporation that has charitable status
- * S.I.R.C.H. has a board of directors comprised of local residents in the county
- * sponsors several programs including Haliburton County Counselling Centre, Parent Support Services, the Crisis Assistance Program and Telecare

Some facts about Women's Emergency House:

- * Women's Emergency House is to be used as a single family dwelling, housing an average of 3 to 4 people at a time (a woman and her children)
- * a family residing in the home will receive 24 hour practical and emotional support from S.I.R.C.H. volunteers
- * the home will be used by the family residing in it, as their family residence, until other accommodation is obtained (up to three weeks)
- * all referrals will be taken over the phone; there will be no walk-ins
- * a risk assessment will be completed with each woman before she enters Women's Emergency House, and if there is a significant safety issue, women will be helped to access safe emergency housing in another county
- * an excellent security system will be installed in the house

What's next?

- * The site chosen as the best location for Women's Emergency House is a privately owned site in the village of Haliburton.
- * Neighbours have recently been contacted by S.I.R.C.H. to inform them about Women's Emergency House. Earlier contact with neighbours was planned but unfortunately due to issues around clear title, it had to be postponed. We consider ongoing contact with neighbours an important part of the project.
- * To date, Dysart Council has shown support of Emergency House, previously by offering six potential building sites, and by passing a resolution in support of Emergency House. Dysart Council issued a letter to the solicitor of S.I.R.C.H. on April 6th, 1994 stating that a building permit would be issued subject to compliance with zoning.
- * Recently, some individuals have questioned whether Women's Emergency House might be considered "public use" and therefore would need to be rezoned prior to the building of the house. This would mean:
 - Emergency House would not be built in May
 - the commitment of volunteers, building supplies and donations might be jeopardized
- * S.I.R.C.H. has obtained legal advice on this matter and has received the opinion that Women's Emergency House, as a single family residence, should not be considered "public use".
- * Dysart Council has asked their solicitor for a legal opinion on whether Women's Emergency House constitutes a "public use". S.I.R.C.H. has asked the Municipality of Dysart for a decision by April 19th. (Basement work on Women's Emergency House is to begin on April 25th!)

We appreciated the support of the hundreds of County residents who have supported this project, and look forward to building on May 7th!

If you want Emergency House built, please let Dysart Council members know.

Family gathers to toast dad's demise

It seems that dad isn't feeling too well and the family has gathered in eager anticipation of the reading of the will.

That is the premise of the Highlands Little Theatre's next production.

The play is set in Lowake, Texas. The dysfunctional family has been called to the patriarch's bedside as he approaches his last day. Author Del Shores has taken this classic plot and turned it into a clever comedy that not only makes the audience laugh, but also brings it face to face with some intense and poignant moments which we are all likely to face at sometime in our lives.

The twist in all the carryings-on, is that daddy has changed the will and then hidden it away somewhere. The members of the family carry out a frantic search, eager to determine who is getting what.

Newcomer Tom Robinson makes his directing debut with this play, Daddy's Dyin', Who's Got The Will. He brings with him experience in other production companies.

The play has a two weekend run. It opens at the HHSS auditorium on Friday April 29 and continues Saturday April 30. It continues the following weekend May 6 and 7. Curtain is at 8 p.m. on all four nights.

Keaney Chrysler of Minden is the show's sponsor. Tickets are available at Paulette's and Undercover Books in Haliburton and The Storeroom in Minden. Advance tickets are $7 for general admission, $5 for students and seniors. At the door the cost is $8 and $6.

All is not well in the Turnover family. Father is about to pass on and the survivors are at each others throats. Hopefully the reading of the last will and testament will straighten things out, but don't count on it. Caught in rehearsal are cast members, from the left, foreground, Monica Homing, Ray Oliphant, and Ruth Still, while in the background Brenda Ellis and Debra Neve duke it out as Craig Saunders looks on.

Spring

*Spring is a time we look foward to
When the earth comes alive and the sky turns blue
Now winter is gone and the crocus shows through
And the birds return, what a beautiful view.*

*You hear the song of the babbling brook
On its banks Pussy Willows, just take a look.
The deer and the chipmunk peek out from their nook
Of all that you see, you could write a book.*

*The sap is flowing from the maple tree
The kettle is hung on the swing pole you see
For the making of syrup for you and for me
To eat with the pancakes is delicious, you'll agree.*

*All nature awakens when new life begins,
And the old mother ewe gives birth to her twins,
And the smelts and the suckers come waving their fins
It livens you up like a kick in the shins!*

*The Canada geese flying in formation
It's a wonder to me how they know their destination
It's a feeling of peace, in our estimation,
We hope you agree with our summation.
Prepared by the Hyland Crest Poets' Corner*

Passing of TV personality noted

Editor:

On Sunday I was shocked to turn on my television set and hear that Betty Thompson, a former CKCO TV star had passed away.

I had the privilege of appearing on her TV show a few years back and later we became friends, keeping in touch by telephone and letters. It was only a few weeks ago when I received her last note.

She was a very courageous lady and worked hard in the fight against cancer. She also worked had for Oktoberfest and countless other causes. She was the first Romper Room lady. I will sorely miss her as will hundreds of her friends and co-workers and thousands of her fans.

Volunteers ensure residents are kept active

Sunday April 3 Estella Burch came at 3:30 p.m. to read to us. Not everyone was feeling well so she decided to wait until next week so they wouldn't miss any of the book. Chapel service was held by Rev. John Burgess and Louise Leonard played the organ. Thank you John and Louise.

Monday afternoon we had the Poet's Corner group compose a poem called "Spring".

Tuesday morning chapel service was held by Rev. Peter Walford-Davis and was a memorial service for Mary Currah who passed away March 27, 1994. Crafts were held at 2 p.m. where we are preparing flowers to dry.

In the evening we played cards with Corinne and we thank her very much.

Wednesday, Doris took a bus load of residents and volunteers to the Red Umbrella Inn for lunch. It was a very nice lunch. The Red Umbrella is a wonderful place with excellent service. The owners, Rick and Kim Tustin asked us to use the money we would have used to pay for lunch as a donation to the building fund for the screened area for the special care unit. We thank them sincerely for their generosity and for their hospitality.

That evening the Grandfathers Four came to play music and sing for us. They were Bill Payne, Eldon

Deacon, Carl Hadley, Don White and Don Burch. We enjoyed our evening and thank them truly.

Thursday afternoon we had our tea party with the Haliburton Baptist Church. We had a wonderful tea and thank them sincerely. That evening, we played bingo. Kathy Woods called bingo for us. Thank you Kathy.

Friday morning during cooking class, some of the residents made their own lunch. In the afternoon we had Happy Hour with Les Schell and Sid and Earl Cooper. Les Schell sang and played the guitar and Doris played the piano. The volunteers who helped take care of the residents and their friends were Mary Guillemain, Dottie Muirhead and Ellen and Don Holden. Thanks to all who helped make this afternoon special.

Food disconnected from the earth

Our relationship with food, like our need for clean air and water, should be a constant reminder that we are biological beings. But today, air is often filtered, warmed, cooled or humidified in our homes, offices and vehicles while we consume far more liquid in various kinds of drinks than as just plain water. Every bit of our nutrition is plant or animal yet people today have little appreciation of the biological nature of their food.

The meals we consume today seem disconnected from the earth where they originate.

Farmer and writer Wendell Berry once told me that in North America, on average, food is consumed 3,200 kilometres from where it is produced. But because air, water, soil and biodiversity are economic "externalities," the ecological consequences of global trade are not reflected in the cost of food.

When I inquired why New Zealand-grown rather than Ontario lamb was featured on the menu of a fancy restaurant north of Toronto, the answer was: "It's cheaper." The true ecological cost of fresh fruit and vegetables in winter in a northern country like Canada are never revealed in their price. For most of human history, food was ingested close to where it grew. We ate locally and seasonally. Our severance from an immediate and intimate relationship with nutrition is a direct result of our disconnection from land that characterizes modern urban society.

Food is one of the best ways to reassess the way we live.

In the farm community of Sakurai City in Nara Prefecture, I encountered 52-year-old Yoshikazu Kawaguchi, who practices a radically different kind of agriculture called natural farming. Kawaguchi begins with the understanding that nature is a complex community of living things which humans do not understand. Consequently, one or a few species of plants or insects

"It was only after I started natural farming that I felt happy to be a farmer. Before, I felt like I was standing in a deadly world. My rice and vegetables were growing but I watched insects dying in agony and my fields became silent places devoid of any other forms of life."

Reflections

by David Suzuki

can't be defined as good or bad when we know so little about their roles in the entire ecosystem.

Kawaguchi doesn't use chemical fertilizers or pesticides, but unlike organic farmers, he does not till the soil. He lets weeds competing with his crops grow or, when he does intrude, he cuts the plants above ground and leaves their tops on the earth.

Within the plant cover, onion shoots were poking through and potatoes inserted into slits were sprouting roots. Wheat seeds are cast over the paddies and harvested in early June. Then rice is planted and harvested in November.

Kawaguchi's soil is sticky, black and pungent with decaying vegetation, in contrast to his neighbours' neat, plowed and weedless furrows of grey dirt.

For 20 years, Kawaguchi had been a typical farmer using chemical pesticides and fertilizers. Then, about 20 years ago, his family began to get sick repeatedly and he developed a life-threatening liver disorder. He happened to read a series of newspaper articles on complex pollution that made him realize that his family's health problems might be caused by the chemicals he was using.

He then read The One Straw Revolution, the seminal work by Masanobu Fukuoka on natural farming that prescribes sowing seeds on to unploughed ground.

Following Fukuoka's methods, Kawaguchi lost his entire rice crop in the first two seasons. But with tenacity and observation, he succeeded the third year. "I realized that natural farming methods are not fixed. The natural farmer should be constantly flexible and must learn intimately about soil, insects and natural conditions of the area."

Once he had changed methods, Kawaguchi looked at the world through different eyes: "It was only after I started natural farming that I felt happy to be a farmer. Before, I felt like I was standing in a deadly world. My rice and vegetables were growing but I watched insects dying in agony and my fields became silent places devoid of any other forms of life."

Kawaguchi believes the increased wealth created by farming with machines and chemicals is an illusion: They have to buy the machines, pay for the fuel and constantly purchase more and more fertilizers and pesticides. Their vegetables or rice harvest may be large, but their crops are empty and quite tasteless. Worst of all, these farmers are destroying the earth and harming people's health."

For Kawaguchi, his farming methods have become a spiritual way of life: "I've tried many forms of spiritual discipline and meditation, but ultimately I realized I am a farmer and have accepted the earth and nature as my teacher. We have been seeing other life as our enemies. But if we see them as our friends, it changes how we act. The more we learn about what's happening in soil, the more we learn about life." More next week from this remarkable farmer and philosopher.

Empty-handed thieves flee post office

The Kinmount Post Office was broken into on April 6, but nothing was taken.

Once inside, the persons responsible tried to pry open the door of a locked safe. The door was not opened and the culprits left. Nothing was stolen from the building.

Anyone with information about this entry is asked to contact Cobocokk OPP at 454-3311 or Lindsay and area Crime Stoppers at 1-800-563-8477.

Homes can be dangerous places

According to the Canadian Safety Council, an average of approximately "every ten minutes" in Canada, someone over the age of 65 dies or is severely injured due to an accident in the home. Controlling your surroundings and knowing your limitations can significantly reduce dangerous and hidden hazards in a home. The Canadian Safety Council provides the following tips to help you avoid injury.

Light Your Path: Make sure lighting is adequate and glare free especially around stairways and in the hall.

Watch Your Step: If you have bare floors, use non-skid wax. Put double-faced tape underneath rugs, make sure there are handrails on each side of the stairs. Ensure that all hallways and stairs are free of clutter. Use non-skid floor strips or rubber mats in the bathtub and shower.

On Your Feet: Don't get up too quickly from a lying position. Sit on the bedside for a few seconds before walking. If you feel yourself falling, try not to tense up or reach out a straight arm to take the shock. Instead, try to relax and go limp. Try to roll as you fall to cut down on the impact. Then bend your arms so you can ease yourself down. During your bath or shower, if you're a little unsteady, sit on a stool with non-skid tips. Wear low-heeled oxfords, loafers or good quality sneakers. Avoid loose slippers or stockinged feet.

Stay In Touch: If you live alone, have someone check on you regularly (once a day, once a week etc.) If this is not possible, you may consider an emergency-response system that can be attached to your phone.

The publication "Seniors World" is now available free of charge at your nearest Information Centre.
